Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue calls for contributions from a diverse group of international scholars regarding various innovative, theoretical/conceptual, empirical, and policy studies on social and environmental justice, particularly their intersections, in different local, national, regional, and transnational contexts concerning the United Nations (UN) Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). The Sustainable Development Goals Report 2022 states that "cascading and interlinked crises are putting the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development in grave danger, along with humanity's very own survival" (unstats.un.org) and "The confluence of crises, dominated by COVID-19, climate change, and conflicts, are creating spin-off impacts on food and nutrition, health, education, the environment, and peace and security, and affecting all the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)" (unstats.un.org). The intersection of social and environmental justice is a critical framework and "pivot" for understanding underlying causes, drivers, and reinforcers of inequalities and vulnerabilities, as is the interaction between knowledge/ways of knowing from the Global South and the North.
